

Better Health in India

Satish Anand (pictured here with his daughter) is one of many wood workers in Saharanpur, India, who carve for Serrv partner Asha Handicrafts and can take advantage of the variety of social programs Asha has developed. One program is a medical center in Saharanpur, where free basic medication and consultations are given to artisan families and the surrounding community. About 200 patients visit the center monthly who otherwise would have no access to medical care.
