

“Design is my home”, says Faith, an artisan working with Trinity Jewellery Crafts in Kenya. She has worked there for five years and loves her job. Though she works as a jewelry maker producing the items, she loves to design her own jewelry in her free time.

Faith suffers from depression and must take daily medication. She benefits greatly from her work at Trinity because she is paid enough to cover her medical expenses. In Nairobi, finding sustainable work to cover medical expenses like Faith’s is extremely difficult; opportunity at Trinity is allowing Faith a steady livelihood.
